

Contents

Foreword	ix
Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction	xi
1. The Place of the Trinity in Barth's Developing Theology	1
Die christliche Dogmatik	3
Barth and Schleiermacher: the question of Neo-Protestantism	8
Schleiermacher and Barth in Die christliche Dogmatik	11
Theology and philosophy: Schicksal und Idee in der Theologie	15
The influence St Anselm's theological method	21
Barth and St Anselm's proof of the existence of God	29
Barth's exposition of St Anselm's proof of the existence of God	32
Assessment of Barth's interpretation of St Anselm's proof	36
The place of the Trinity in the Church Dogmatics	39
Barth's starting point and the development of the dogma of the Trinity	44
2. The Doctrine of the Trinity and its Relationship to Christology	47
The 'root' of the dogma of the Trinity and the divinity of Jesus Christ	49
The Holy Spirit and the 'root' of the dogma of the Trinity	53
Barth's doctrine of God's 'three-in-oneness'	60
God's 'one-in-threeness'	64
The Trinity and Christology	66
The christological problem and the confession 'Jesus Christ, 'very God' and very Man'	71

3. The Relationships in the Dogma of the Trinity with the Doctrine of Creation, Part One	81
The orientation of the doctrine of creation within the structure of Barth's thought	81
Jesus Christ: electing God and elected Man	85
The doctrines of creation and the covenant	88
Creation as the external basis of the covenant	89
Covenant as the internal basis of creation	94
The relationship between knowledge of God and knowledge of the creature	100
Creaturely knowledge of God and creaturely knowledge of the creature	104
Karl Barth's doctrine of analogy	108
Knowledge of the creature in relation to knowledge of God: analogia fidei and analogia relationis	116
4. The Relationships in the Dogma of the Trinity with the Doctrine of Creation, Part Two	119
Catholic and Reformed understanding of the God-creature relationship	124
The methodological importance of the humanity of Jesus in Reformed theology	130
The doctrines of an- and enhypostasis as christological formulae	135
The viability of Barth's trinitarian method of understanding the God-creature relationship	144
5. Conclusion	149
The dogma of the Trinity in the Eastern and Western churches	149
St Basil's ' De Spiritu Sancto '	152
The relationship between dogma and kerygma in ' De Spiritu Sancto '	154
The deity of the Spirit	155
Nicaea and the unity of God	156

Tertullian and the Trinity in the West	159
Tertullian and St Irenaeus on the 'Economy'	162
Appendix 1	169
Appendix 2	173
Appendix 3	175
Bibliography	179
Index	191