

Contents

List of Illustrations	xv
Maps	xvii
Introduction	1
Everyday Activism	3
Empire, Nation, and Zionism in the Jewish World of East-Central Europe	7
1. The National Mission	27
Conquer the World	28
Walking on Eggs	32
The Aim of a 'Publicly and Legally Assured' Position of Influence	35
Travelling Nationalists Encounter Their Nation	41
A Civilizing Mission	46
2. Welfare, Relief, Political Power	60
Vienna and Prague: To 'Become the Representatives of the Jewish People'	60
Galicia: 'Zionist Work . . . if Organized Correctly'	68
The Generalgouvernement: 'To Rally the Entire Jewish People for Relief Work'	73
Relief Work under the Oberkommando Ost	82
'Under the Slave Whip'	86
New Zionists	91
Consequences of Relief Work	94
3. 'The Most Valuable National Fund': Childcare and Education	112
To Impress One's Hallmark	113
Saving the Children	116
'For Palestine to Come to Them': Building Schools	123
A New Pedagogy for a New Time	126
Muscular Young Men, Straight-Up Girls	129
A Space for the Youth	134
Care for the Victims of the Pogroms	136
4. Violence, Antisemitism, and Self-Defence	151
Glory through Arms	152
Liberation or the Decline of the Imperial Option?	156
Fighters for Human Rights and National Freedom	161
The National and the Local	166
'Dreadful Events Have Taken Place in Our Town'	171
Protest and Autonomy	179

5. Representing the Nation	199
Uniting the People	200
Nation and Community: Prague and Vienna	202
East Galicia: Survival as a Nation	210
Other Paths to National Representation	219
Representing the Jewish Nation's Will to the World	223
6. The Ancient Ideal and the New World	244
New Mass Politics Following the February Revolution	245
History's Categorical Imperative	250
The Russian Way	256
'Der proletaryat hot dos vort!'	261
Ready for Departure	265
What Do We Need Palestine For?	272
Conclusion: Many Nation-Buildings	287
Strength in Numbers	288
Strength in the Movement	292
Small Struggles and Big Stories	296
Bibliography	303
Index	333