

Locative Tourism Applications

A Sensory Ethnography of the Augmented City

Erin E. Lynch

Contents

List of figures	viii
Acknowledgements	x
Introduction	1
PART I
Departure points and orientations	5
1 Departure points	7
2 Orientations	20
PART II
A tour of locative tourism apps: between gaze and performance	33
3 Gaze	35
4 Performance	68
PART III
A tale of two cities (case studies)	91
5 A city of gaps – mediating the ruin in Christchurch	93
6 A city of screens – augmenting the branded cityscape in Montreal	125
Conclusion	156
Appendix: Twelve-city tour of applications	162
Bibliography	165
Index	186

Figures

3.1	Taking the archive to the streets in Streetmuseum .	37
3.2	Gamifying the tourist gaze in Edinburgh.	39
3.3	The Arsenal, askew (overlay of archival image with street view, created using Historic NOLA ).	41
3.4	Positioning the user in Montreal – a navigation overlay helps users line up the augmented reality feature with the world around them.	42
3.5	An iconic sign just below Derry’s history city walls (in the Bogside neighbourhood, a historically Catholic/Nationalist stronghold) reads “Welcome to Free Derry.”	46
3.6	A sign visible from the city walls (in the traditionally protestant/Unionist west bank of the city) declares the area “still under siege.”	47
3.7	Derry’s symbolic Peace Bridge, which is integrated into the Derry tourism logo.	48
3.8	Derry’s remaining border wall, visible from the route of Walk the Walls .	49
3.9	An augmented panorama, with an animated Space Needle front and centre.	52
3.10	Extending the tourist gaze with the Space Needle app: the augmented “view below” through a “space spot.”	53
3.11	“Digging” for the past with Streetmuseum Londinium .	54
3.12	An artefact is (virtually) revealed on the site as the user sweeps away the digital dirt with their fingers.	55
3.13	Traces of others on Hume’s (lucky) toe, Edinburgh.	57
3.14	Feeling for ghosts at Muriel’s séance lounge in New Orleans.	61
3.15	Small fish hang in water-filled plastic bags along the stalls of the Hong Kong fish market.	64
3.16	Parrots in the Hong Kong bird market – for looking and listening to, but not for touching.	65
3.17	Incense hangs in the air at Man Mo Temple.	66

4.1	From market to museum – neon signage points tourists towards the main attractions in Seattle’s Pike Place Market.	73
4.2	Melbourne’s stately Shrine of Remembrance in a moment of quiet between tours. The Shrine is a common stop on tours of the city – locative and otherwise.	74
4.3	Heritage haunts the streetscape in Melbourne’s Lost! 100 .	78
4.4	Nature as a canvas for other urban inscriptions in Melbourne’s Botanical Gardens.	82
5.1	The ruins of the city’s once-iconic Christchurch Cathedral, as they remained in late 2016.	94
5.2	Evidence of life and porous boundaries at Christchurch’s SOL Square.	104
5.3	Disorientation on High Street – an app user attempts to navigate the rapidly changing streetscape of the Transitional City.	108
5.4	Phil Price’s sculpture Nucleus (2006) on post-earthquake High Street.	112
5.5	A street print of Tony Fomison’s (1971) No! in the context of High Street’s urban inscription.	114
5.6	A wall of resilient plant life conceals a building site on High Street.	117
5.7	Mark Catley’s (2016) installation Sign o’ the Times .	118
5.8	A temporary inscription comments on the politics of the rebuild. (On a bench outside High Street’s C1 Café).	119
6.1	Gazing between screens at Cité Mémoire ’s “Babylon of the North.”	129
6.2	Spectacular intimacy at Cité Mémoire ’s “The First Executioner.”	130
6.3	Seams in the tour – a wild cursor appears at Cité Mémoire ’s “The Creation of the World.”	131
6.4	The various projections of Cité Mémoire are collected into one narrative at the “Grand Tableau.”	134
6.5	“Faces of Montreal” personalise the Old Port’s carnivalesque atmosphere.	142
6.6	Ghosts of Montreal past by day.	144
6.7	Ghosts of Montreal past by night, in Cité Mémoire ’s “From Marie-Joséphé to Jackie Robinson.”	145
6.8	Intimate gaze in an AR tableau at Dalhousie station.	146
6.9	Enabling the city to sense you in Cité Mémoire .	147
6.10	Co-producing the projection with others in Cité Mémoire ’s “The Creation of the World.”	150