

MAGISTERIA

The Entangled Histories of Science and Religion

NICHOLAS SPENCER

Contents

Introduction: The Natures of the Beast	1
The story of a story	1
Developing and destroying a myth	3
What is a human, and who gets to say?	6
Entanglement	9
Part 1: Science and Religion Before Science or Religion
1. The Nature of Natural Philosophy: Science and Religion in the Ancient World	15
‘Her quivering limbs were delivered to the flames’: placing a murder	15
‘All things are full of gods’: scientia and religio	17
‘We have no need for curiosity beyond Christ Jesus’: ambiguous attitudes	20
‘Do not let anyone ask if Moses is writing a work of astronomy’: from the ruins	23
2. A Fragile Brilliance: Science and Islam	31
‘There was no more science worth mentioning in Islamic countries’: the case against Islamic science	31
‘O Philosopher . . . What is good?’: golden years	33
‘Not as an invading force but as an invited guest’: the case for Islamic science	36
‘The problems of physics are of no importance for us’: the points of tension	40
3. Ambiguous and Argumentative: Science and Judaism	49
‘Nature is so obedient to him’: science in early Judaism	49
‘Our Gods are as numerous as our towns’: varied believing	51

'Apothecaries, cooks and bakers': Maimonides and the handmaiden	56
'It was inevitable that the philosophers deny the Torah': the reaction	60
4. Science in Christendom	65
'A poignant lost opportunity': the so-called 'Middle' Ages	65
'Between you and me, reason only shall be judge': medieval physicists	68
'What else should authority be called but a bridle?': the coming of Aristotle	72
'Nothing is better known because of knowing theology': fighting in Paris	75
'According to the imagination': the birth of the thought experiment	80
5. 1543 and All That	85
'A memorable history of science and religion': not a revolution	85
'The theologians will easily calm down': the revolution will be postponed	87
'The indestructible sun [is] subject to destruction': the Wittenberg interpretation	93
'A martyr for magic': the death of Bruno	99

Part 2: Genesis

6. Galileo Galilei	105
'A prisoner to the Inquisition': on meeting Galileo	105
'Have faith, Galileo, and go forth': navigating a new world	106
'Why stand ye gazing up into heaven?': rising star	112
'How one goes to heaven and not how heaven goes': coming out writing	116
'Who would there be to settle our controversies if Aristotle were deposed?': turning tides	122
'I resorted to the natural gratification everyone feels for his own subtleties': endgame	127
7. The Many Births of Science	131
'Experimental Christians': 'Protestant' science	131

'As pious as he is capable': 'Catholic' science	138
'Not to intermeddle in Spiritual things': 'secular' science	146
8. The Perils of Perfect Harmony	155
'This most elegant system': religious enlightenment	155
'On the wonderful secrets of nature': physico-theology	159
'Our employment in heaven': science in the English Eden	164
'Too much to deny and too little to be sure': underneath the harmony	173
9. Mechanising the Soul	181
'The mechanism of the human mind': machine learning	181
'Make the theologians swallow the poison': animal cruelty	185
'Let us not limit nature's resources': polyp power	191
'It is a monster got of a man and she-baboon': blurred boundaries	194
'Antagonists think they have quenched his opinions': the tide turning	201

Part 3: Exodus

10. About Time	209
'Into the abyss of time': naturalising Genesis	209
'A barren Golgotha': the case of the brain	218
'Gradual and slow improvement of human nature': a new future	225
11. The Balance	235
'Better than a dog anyhow': Marry. Not Marry.	235
'Like confessing a murder': between Erasmus and Paley	240
'An incalculable waste': grandeur and grief	246
'I am sharpening up my claws': and so to Oxford	252
12. Globalisation	263
'Illuminate the dark paths': missionary science	263
'The vileness and degeneracy of Europe': Western science	271
'Our race is depressed enough': human science	278
13. Peace and War	289
'The science of dead matter': peace	289
'An irreversible doom': war	301

Part 4: The Ongoing, Entangled Histories of Science and Religion

14. The Trial of the Century	317
'They are true parasites': America before Scopes	317
'Civilisation is on trial': the road to Dayton	321
'This is a battle between religion and science': the trial	325
'Between science and Bryanism': aftermath	330
15. Entangled and Uncertain	335
'A purely scientific matter': the new physics	335
'Spooky action at a distance': on not bringing down the house	337
'A conscious and intelligent mind': Einstein and friends	341
'Therefore, there is a Creator': a new beginning	348
16. Infantile Delusions	353
'The natural history of religion': primitive religion	353
'A whole climate of opinion': infantile religion	358
'Superstition, like belief, must die': revaluing religion	362
17. Storming the Heavens	369
'I'll give you my halo; you give me your helmet': religious science	369
'People think of these men as not just superior men but different creatures': scientific religion	376
18. Irreducibly Complex	385
'Scratch an altruist': ending the mystery of human nature	385
'Breath-taking inanity': anti-evolutionism 2.0	390
'Replete with religious metaphors': irreducible complexity	395
19. Artificial Anxieties	401
'His brain was on fire': abnormal activity	401
'Humans are merely tools': AIpocalypse now	408
'We should not be irreverently usurping His power': taking the Test	415
Notes	419
Further Reading	447
Acknowledgements	451
Index	453