

Are You Judging Me Yet?

Poetry and Everyday Sexism

Kim Moore

SEREN

Contents

Foreword	7
Map	9
Desire Lines: Variations on an Introduction	10
We Are Coming	26
Yes, I Am Judging You	28
Not Looking Away: A Poetics of Attention	39
A Problem with the Male Gaze	48
Mode of Address, Or, Who Are You Talking To?	56
Guilty For Being A Man	67
Between-Us: A Poetics of Perception	71
Sexism is a Slippery and Fluid Term	76
Something in the Telling: A Poetics of Relationality	84
Lyric Variations (1)	91
Insidious Trauma: A Biography of Violence	100
Lyric Variations (2)	106
Poems of Desire: A Mode of Attention	114

Women's Images of Men – Desire, Vulnerability and the Gaze	119
An Electric Current: Poems of Wilfulness	129
Doing Gender	135
Intimate Witness: A Poetics of Watching	140
The Body is the Blindspot of Speech	145
The Annihilation of Men	154
What Is Between-Us	158
Considering Men	164
To Give an Account of the Self	169
Variations on a Conclusion	177
Coda: On Ways of Looking	181
Reader Checklist	187
Acknowledgements	188
Notes	190