

The Linguistic Roots of Ancient Greek

DON RINGE

OXFORD
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Contents

Acknowledgments	viii
Abbreviations and conventions	ix
1. Introduction	1
2. Proto-Indo-European	4
2.1 Introduction	4
2.2 PIE phonology	7
2.2.1 PIE obstruents	8
2.2.2 PIE sonorants and high vowels	11
2.2.3 PIE non-high vowels	12
2.2.4 PIE phonological rules	13
2.2.5 PIE accent	23
2.3 PIE inflectional morphology	24
2.3.1 PIE inflectional categories	24
2.3.2 Formal expression of inflectional categories	28
2.3.3 PIE verb inflection	30
2.3.4 PIE noun inflection	51
2.3.5 PIE adjective inflection	66
2.3.6 The inflection of other PIE nominals	69
2.4 PIE derivational morphology	76
2.4.1 Compounding	76
2.4.2 PIE derivational suffixes	77
2.5 PIE syntax	81
2.6 The PIE lexicon	87
3. The phonological development of Proto-Greek	88
3.1 Introduction	88
3.2 The elimination of laryngeals	88
3.2.1 The loss of laryngeals next to non-high vowels	89
3.2.2 Developments of laryngeals preceding high vowels and syllabic sonorants	93
3.2.3 Developments of tautosyllabic laryngeals following high vowels and syllabic sonorants	99
3.2.4 Developments of laryngeals not adjacent to a syllabic	106
3.3 Early developments of nasals	112
3.4 Early developments of obstruents	116
3.4.1 ‘Thorn’ clusters	116
3.4.2 The merger of palatals and velars	116
3.4.3 Early developments of labiovelars	117

3.4.4 Early developments of stop clusters	121
3.4.5 The devoicing of aspirates	125
3.4.6 Loss of *t and *t <sup>h</sup> before final *-i	128
3.5 The origin and development of Proto-Greek *h	131
3.5.1 *s > *h	131
3.5.2 *h-copying ('Hauchumsprung')	141
3.5.3 Osthoff's Law; loss of word-final stops	144
3.5.4 Grassmann's Law	146
3.5.5 Irregularities of aspiration	150
3.6 The development of PIE *y	153
3.6.1 Sievers' Law in Greek	153
3.6.2 Word-initial *y	157
3.6.3 Postconsonantal *y	158
3.7 Other clusters of dental stops	167
3.8 Accent in Proto-Greek	169
3.9 Relative chronology of sound changes	170
4. The development of Proto-Greek inflectional morphology	173
4.1 Introduction	173
4.2 Changes in verb inflection	173
4.2.1 The development of present stems	174
4.2.2 The development of aorist stems	201
4.2.3 Perfect stems	216
4.2.4 Future stems	223
4.2.5 Mood suffixes and the augment	225
4.2.6 Personal endings	227
4.2.7 Participles and infinitives	232
4.2.8 The accent of Greek verb forms	232
4.3 Changes in nominal inflection	233
4.3.1 Cases	233
4.3.2 Accent and ablaut	234
4.3.3 Stem types: Nouns	239
4.3.4 Stem types: Adjectives	250
4.3.5 Noun and adjective endings	254
4.3.6 Pronouns	257
4.3.7 Numerals	260
5. The initial diversification of Greek dialects	262
5.1 Introduction	262
5.2 Aiolic	264
5.2.1 Evidence for an Aiolic group	264
5.2.2 The first compensatory lengthening	266
5.3 South Greek	271
5.3.1 Phonological evidence for South Greek	272
5.3.2 Morphological evidence for South Greek	276
5.3.3 An assessment of South Greek	280

5.4 Other widely shared early innovations	281
5.4.1 Early phonological innovations	281
5.4.2 Early morphological innovations	294
6. The Attic-Ionic dialects	300
6.1 Introduction	300
6.2 Attic and Ionic sound changes	300
6.3 Attic-Ionic morphological innovations	309
7. Widely shared later innovations	312
7.1 Introduction	312
7.2 Later sound changes	312
7.2.1 vσ-clusters	312
7.2.2 Loss of *f	316
7.2.3 Loss of intervocalic *h and *j; contractions of vowels in hiatus	318
7.2.4 Long mid vowels	319
7.2.5 Outcomes of palatalization: σσ ~ ττ	323
7.2.6 Psilosis	324
7.3 Later morphological changes	324
7.3.1 Third-person plural imperatives	324
7.3.2 Subjunctives and optatives	326
7.3.3 Perfect stems	327
8. Syntax	328
8.1 Constituent order	328
8.2 Prohibitions	330
8.3 Moods	332
8.4 Univerbation	333
8.5 Clitics	334
8.6 Prepositions	334
8.7 Reflexives	335
9. Lexicon	336
9.1 Derivational morphology	336
9.2 Sources of the Greek lexicon	338
Bibliography	343
Index	361
1 Greek	361
2 Proto-Indo-European	379
3 Other Indo-European languages	390