Masculinity and Identity in Irish Literature

Heroes, Lads, and Fathers

Cassandra S. Tully de Lope

Routledge
Taylor & Francis Group
NEW YORK AND LONDON

Contents

List of figures x
List of tables xi
Acknowledgements xii

1 Introduction 1
1.1 Preliminary considerations 1
1.2 Using corpus studies in the analysis of literary texts 3
1.3 "Identity" as a multifaceted concept 4
1.4 Terminology 6
1.5 Organisation of this book 9
References 10

2 Irish identity, language, and masculinity 12
2.1 Introduction 12
2.2 Language as a gendered performance 13
2.3 Language in fiction 15
2.3.1 Irish English in fiction 17
2.4 Irish masculinity 18
2.4.1 Heroes, lads, father figures, and other models of masculinity in Ireland 20
2.4.2 Irish masculinity in fiction 26
2.5 Conclusion 29
References 30

3 Interdisciplinary methodologies for literary studies 35
3.1 Introduction: Corpus linguistics and digital humanities 35
3.2 Corpus stylistics 36
3.3 Merging discourse analysis and corpus studies 38

3.4 Corpus-based vs corpus-driven 40
3.5 Characterisation 42
3.6 The case of terms of address, speech acts, and body language 43
3.7 Conclusion 46
References 47

4 The Corpus of Male Irish Writers 51
4.1 Introduction: Preliminary questions when building a corpus 51
4.2 The creation of a corpus 52
4.3 The Corpus of Male Irish Writers (CMIW) 54
4.4 A brief insight into the novels of the CMIW 56
4.4.1 Characters against the world 57
4.4.2 Characters against each other 61
4.5 Conclusion 66
References 67

5 Introduction to corpus analysis and initial results 69
5.1 Brief insight into Sketch Engine's interface 69
5.1.1 Wordlists and keywords 70
5.1.2 N-grams 72
5.1.3 Word sketches 74
5.1.4 Concordance: basic and advanced (CQL) 77
5.2 Initial results 80
5.2.1 Word sketches of hero, man, and lad 80
5.2.2 Collocates of like a man 82
5.3 Conclusion 84
References 84

6 Male vocatives and male hierarchy 87
6.1 Terms of address and functions of vocatives 87
6.2 Proper names (Mr Bell) 92
6.3 Nicknames (Charlie boy, wee Francy) 93
6.4 Male nouns (Father, Dad, Da) 95
6.5 Insults amongst male characters 97
6.6 Endearments 98
6.7 Conclusion 99
References 100

7 Adverbs and verbs of speech to imply domination 101
7.1 Taxonomy of verbs of speech 101
7.1.1 The dominance model 103
7.2 Queries carried out regarding verbs of speech 106
7.3 He + verbs of speech + adverb: He said aggressively 108
7.4 I + verb of speech + adverb: I said faintly 118
7.5 You + verb of speech + adverb: You smiled cruelly 126
7.6 Proper names + verb of speech + adverb: Ruttledge said quietly 130
7.7 Conclusion 141
References 142

8 Body language, hypermasculinity, and other models of masculinity 144
8.1 Introduction: Body language and masculinity 144
8.2 Verbs of movement 145
8.3 Parts of the body and masculinity 150
8.3.1 Eye(s) 151
8.3.2 Hand(s) 152
8.3.3 Shoulder 154
8.3.4 Arm(s) 155
8.3.5 Head 157
8.4 Conclusion 158
References 159

9 Conclusion 161
9.1 The research in this book 161
9.2 Contribution to the field of literary and linguistic research 162
9.3 Indexicality and Irish masculinities 163
9.4 Concluding remarks and future lines of investigation 164
Reference 165

Index 167

Figures

5.1 Display of N-grams containing man in the corpus 74
5.2 Dual display of Word sketch of man 76
5.3 Display of concordance lines of query: [word= "he"] [lemma= "say"] [tag= "RB.?"] 79
5.4 Word Sketch Differences of man and hero, and man and lad 81
5.5 N-grams of like a ... 83
6.1 Occurrences of vocatives in the corpus 89
6.2 Subdivisions of vocatives in the corpus 90
7.1 Division in categories of He + VoS 110
7.2 Division in categories of I + VoS 120
7.3 Division in categories of You + VoS 127
7.4 Division in categories of proper names + VoS 132
8.1 Division in categories of body language in the corpus 148

Tables

4.1 Specifications of the Corpus of Male Irish Writers and its subcorpus 55
5.1 Display of wordlists of verbs and their absolute frequency in the Corpus of Male Irish Writers 71
7.1 Model of gender dominance for verbs of speech 103
7.2 Pronoun "he" plus adverbs per verb of speech 115
7.3 Pronoun "I" plus adverbs per verb of speech 123
7.4 Pronoun "you" plus adverbs per verb of speech 129
7.5 Subjects with "proper names" plus adverbs per verb of speech 137
8.1 Verbs related to body language 147
8.2 N-grams of eye(s) 152
8.3 N-grams of hand(s) 153
8.4 N-grams of shoulder(s) 154
8.5 N-grams of arm(s) 156
8.6 N-grams of head 157