

Dr. Susan I. Moody's Travels to Iran, 1909–1934

Courageous Odyssey

Hoda Mahmoudi

Contents

List of Figures	ix
List of Map	xv
Foreword	xii
Acknowledgments	xiv
Introduction	1
1 A Woman of Her Time	6
2 A Woman of Faith	15
3 Educator, Artist, Physician	30
4 A New Believer	47
5 A New Faith: Embracing the Bahá'í Call	55
6 In the Presence of 'Abdu'l-Bahá	67
7 The Road to Tehran	88
8 At Home in Tehran	95
9 A School for Girls	115

viii	Contents
10	Murder in Tehran	132
11	Strong of Heart	143
12	Joyous in This Season	147
	Bibliography	160
	Index	168

List of Figures

0.1	Portrait of Susan Moody, the National Bahá'í Archives, United States	v
6.1	Susan Moody, with the Bahá'í men of Baku, © Bahá'í World Centre	72
6.2	Portrait of Susan Moody, the National Bahá'í Archives, United States	73
6.3	Susan Moody with Mirzá 'Abd Allah (left) and Badirah (right), children of Ibn Abkar, standing man unknown, the National Bahá'í Archives, United States	74
6.4	Susan Moody (seated), posed with Dr. Yunis Khan (left) and his wife, Zarrin Taj (right), the National Bahá'í Archives, United States	75
6.5	October 23, 1934, Tehran. The funeral of Susan Moody. Some of the students from the Tarbíyat Girls School, the National Bahá'í Archives, United States	76
6.6	Susan Moody with an unknown child, the National Bahá'í Archives, United States	76
6.7	Susan Moody (right), with Ghodsea Ashraf, the National Bahá'í Archives, United States	77
6.8	From left: Fariburz Lisan al-Sultan and Sarvar Mihrban (the Zoroastrian Bahá'í couple), Elizabeth Stewart, and Susan Moody	78
6.9	From left to right: Lillian Kappes, Muhibbih Sultan, Muchul Khanum (wife of Muhibbih Sultan and daughter of Tayirih Khanum), Susan Moody, Sarah Clock, Elizabeth Stewart, and three sons of Muchul Khanum and Muhibbih Sultan, the National Bahá'í Archives, United States	79
6.10	Standing from left to right: Elizabeth Stewart, Muhammad Labib, Sarah Clock, and Nur al-Din; seated, from left to right: Lillian Kappes, Mahbubih (niece of Mr. Labib), Susan Moody, Munireh (pupil at the Tarbíyat School), and Ghodsea Ashraf, the National Bahá'í Archives, United States	80

- 6.11 Portrait of Frederick Douglas, drawn by Eva Webster Russell, Courtesy of the National Park Service, Museum Management Program, and Frederick Douglass National Historic Site, FRDO-5219 81
- 6.12 Sihat Hospital in Tehran, Dr. Susan Moody pictured with hospital doctors and staff © Bahá'í World Centre 81
- 6.13 Susan Moody's stationary and letter written to Joseph Hannen, Washington, D.C., the National Bahá'í Archives, United States 82
- 6.14 From left to right: Susan Moody, Cecelia Harrison, Beatrice Davies, Isabella Brittingham, and Eva Webster Russell. Chicago, 1903, during Isabella Brittingham's visit to Chicago, when Moody embraced the Bahá'í Faith, the National Bahá'í Archives, United States 83
- 6.15 Seated behind framed calligraphy: Tayirih Khanum and Susan Moody. Standing far right: Fatimih Khanum (wife of Haji Akhund), 1910, the National Bahá'í Archives, United States 83
- 6.16 The tomb of Mirzá 'Alí-Muhammad (also known as Ibn-i-Asdaq) and his son, Ruhu'lláh. The grave of Lillian Kappes is in the garden near the tomb. Seated left to right: Susan Moody, Háji Amín or Hasan-i-Ardikáni (with young 'Alí-Muhammad Vargá in front of him), and Elizabeth Stewart. On the right of the photo is Valryu'llah Vargá, the National Bahá'í Archives, United States 84
- 6.17 Middle row center: Dr. Susan Moody and Háji Amin (immediate right) with a group of Bahá'ís of Zoroastrian background, the National Bahá'í Archives, United States 84
- 6.18 Left to right: Susan Moody, Sarah Clock, Elizabeth Stewart, and Lillian Kappes seated in the courtyard of their home in Tehran, the National Bahá'í Archives, United States 85
- 6.19 Seated from left to right: Mustafa Nuri, unknown man, Tayirih Khanum (wife of Nuri), Charles E. Sprague, Susan Moody, Amir Khan, and a physician on the police chief's staff, 1910, photo taken at the home of Ahmad Ali Khan, chief of police, the National Bahá'í Archives, United States 86
- 6.20 1918 photograph taken at the home of Bahman Mirza Shidani while entertaining the American Commission and American Legation. The first group of Iranian Bahá'í men and women were photographed together and allowed to be published. Seated in the first row are Lillian Kappes (far left), Elizabeth Stewart and Susan Moody (3rd and 4th from left), and Sarah Clock (7th from left), the National Bahá'í Archives, United States 86

List of Map

- 0.1 Map depicting the travels of Susan Moody across Turkey, Georgia, Azerbaijan and Iran. Image shows a map of the Middle East with the travel points of Susan Moody highlighted xv