

The Wiley Blackwell Companion to Comparative Theology

A Festschrift in Honor of Francis X. Clooney, SJ

Edited by

Axel M. Oaks Takacs
Joseph L. Kimmel

WILEY Blackwell

Contents

|                                                                                                                                                   |          |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------|
| List of Contributors                                                                                                                              | ix       |
| Preface                                                                                                                                           | xiv      |
| John B. Carman and William A. Graham                                                                                                       |          |
| Acknowledgments                                                                                                                                   | xvi      |
| Introduction                                                                                                                                      | xvii     |
| Axel M. Oaks Takacs and Joseph L. Kimmel                                                                                                   |          |
| Part I Theories and Methods in Comparative Theology                                                                                        | 1 |
| 1 Five Insights on Method from Comparative Theology                                                                                               | 3        |
| Jason W. Smith                                                                                                                             |          |
| 2 Imagining Religion, Intuiting Comparison: Comparing the Roles of Inner Sense in the Scholarship of Jonathan Z. Smith and Francis X. Clooney, SJ | 13       |
| Joseph L. Kimmel                                                                                                                           |          |
| 3 Resisting Religious Relativism in Comparative Theology                                                                                          | 21       |
| Catherine Cornille                                                                                                                         |          |
| 4 Grounding Theology of Religions in Comparative Theology: A Fulfillment Model in Reverse                                                         | 32       |
| Ruben L.F. Habito                                                                                                                          |          |
| 5 Beyond the Text: Comparative Theology and Oral Cultures                                                                                         | 43       |
| Nougoutna Norbert Litoing                                                                                                                  |          |
| 6 Faith Seeking Understanding or Understanding Seeking Faith?                                                                                     | 51       |
| Bennett DiDente Comerford                                                                                                                  |          |
| 7 Kinesics, Proxemics, and Haptics: A Śākta Method for Comparative Theology                                                                       | 63       |
| Pravina Rodrigues                                                                                                                          |          |

|                                                                                                                                                            |            |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------|
| Part II The Spirituality, Vocation, and Formation of the Comparative Theologian                                                                     | 77  |
| 8 “The One Who Prays Is a (Comparative) Theologian”: The Spirituality of Francis X. Clooney’s Comparative MethodChristopher Conway              | 79         |
| 9 Settling the Seer: “Deep Learning” and the Yoga of SlownessMichelle Bentsman                                                                  | 89         |
| 10 Comparative Theology Embodied: The Mentorship, Methodology, and Ministry of Francis X. ClooneyKatie Mahowski Mylroie                         | 95         |
| 11 Performance and Engagement: Reconsidering Religious Experience in Contemporary Comparative TheologyReid B. Locklin                           | 104        |
| 12 A Fowlerian Perspective on the Faith of the ComparativistErik Ranstrom                                                                       | 115        |
| 13 Comparative Theology as Process Not Conclusion: Francis Clooney on the Proper Formation of Comparative Theological ReadersJohn J. Thatamanil | 129        |
| Part III Comparative Theology and the Society of Jesus                                                                                              | 139 |
| 14 Comparing Jesuits: Roberto de Nobili, Henri de Lubac, and Francis X. ClooneyJames Fredericks                                                 | 141        |
| 15 Francis X. Clooney, SJ: Jesuit, Scholar, MissionaryChristian S. Krokus                                                                       | 151        |
| 16 The Ignatian Tradition and the Intellectual Virtues of a Comparative TheologianPeng Yin                                                      | 162        |
| 17 Wonder Grasps Anything: Punctuation and Patristic Theology in the Early Colonial PhilippinesMaria Cecilia Holt                               | 173        |
| Part IV Expanding on Francis X. Clooney’s Corpus                                                                                                    | 185 |
| 18 The Interpretation of Scripture in the Comparative Theology of Francis X. ClooneyLeo D. Lefebure                                             | 187        |
| 19 “Good Dark Love Birds, Will You Help?”: Comparative Reflections on Clooney’s His Hiding Place Is DarknessKimberley C. Patton          | 198        |
| 20 “Paradoxology”: The Śrīvaiṣṇava Art of Praising ViṣṇuVasudha Narayanan                                                                       | 209        |
| 21 Hymns on Mary in Hindu–Muslim–Christian DialogueKlaus von Stosch                                                                             | 225        |
| 22 Mary and Motherhood – A Comparatively Informed ReconsiderationMara Brecht                                                                    | 235        |

|                                                                                                                                                            |            |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------|
| Part V    Exercises in Comparative Theology                                                                                                         | 247 |
| 23    Transformational Liberation in the Age of COVID-19: A Comparative Theology of “the Good Woman”Tracy Sayuki Tiemeier                       | 249        |
| 24    And the Angels Wept: How Jewish and Hindu Narratives May Enrich Each OtherArvind Sharma                                                   | 260        |
| 25    Modification, Emanation, and Pariñāma-Vāda in Medieval Theistic Vedānta and KabbalahIthamar Theodor                  | 268        |
| 26    Advancing the Ritual-Liturgical Turn in Comparative Theology: Good Friday as a Case StudyDaniel Joslyn-Siemiatkoski                       | 280        |
| 27    Creative Fidelity in Expanding the CanonScott Steinkerchner, OP and Martin Badenhorst, OP                                                 | 291        |
| 28    Slow Reading of Beautiful Writing: Calligraphy as Vehicle for Comparative TheologyLucinda Mosher                                          | 302        |
| 29    Joy in the Earth: A Christian Cosmology Based on Agapic NondualismJon Paul Sydnor                                                         | 313        |
| 30    Perceiving Divinity, Cultivating Wonder: A Christian–Islamic Comparative Theological Essay on Balthasar’s GestaltAxel M. Oaks Takacs      | 326        |
| 31    Paradoxes of Desire in St John of the Cross and Solomon ibn Gabirol: Thinking with Poetry in Comparative TheologyLuis Manuel Girón-Negrón | 345        |
| Part VI    Comparative Theology Beyond the Discipline                                                                                               | 371 |
| 32    Locating the Self in the Study of Religion: Francis Clooney and the Experiment of Hindu–Christian StudiesJonathan Edelmann                | 373        |
| 33    Learning Interreligiously as Public Theology: Limits and Possibilities for Institutional LeadersMichelle Voss Roberts                     | 389        |
| 34    Comparative Theology and Public Theology: In Search of a Responsible Theology TodayAlbertus Bagus Laksana                                 | 400        |
| 35    God Meets Us There: Prison as True Home for the Christian Comparative TheologianMark J. Edwards                                           | 411        |
| Part VII    The Past, Present, and Future of Comparative Theology                                                                                   | 419 |
| 36    Comparative Theology Beyond ReligionizationMarianne Moyaert                                                                               | 421        |
| 37    Asking an Unusual Question of Kabir and Kazi Nazrul IslamRachel Fell McDermott                                                            | 431        |

|    |                                                                                                                                                   |     |
|----|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| 38 | Comparative Theology avant la lettre ? A Muslim “Deep Reading”of the Rāmāyaṇa in Early Modern South AsiaShankar Nair | 442 |
| 39 | Creativity and Resistance in Comparative Theology: Lessons fromEighteenth-Century KoreaWon-Jae Hur                                 | 449 |
| 40 | In Praise of Artisans: Ramon Marti, Georges Anawati, and the Importanceof LanguagesWilhelmus Valkenberg                            | 460 |
| 41 | Lectio Divina and Comparative Reading in the History of Christian–MuslimEncountersRita George-Tvrtković                     | 470 |
| 42 | Vicarious Voyage: What Difference Does Comparative Theology Make for Theology?S. Mark Heim                                             | 480 |
| 43 | Is There or Shall We Need a “Home” for Comparative Theologies?A Ru (Confucian) Response to Francis X. ClooneyBin Song              | 491 |
| 44 | Comparative Theology After ClooneyHugh Nicholson                                                                                       | 501 |
|    | Author Index                                                                                                                                      | 510 |
|    | Subject Index                                                                                                                                     | 513 |