

Hungry for Peace

Food Peacebuilding in an Entangled World

Elaine Mei Lien Pratley

陈美莲

EDINBURGH
University Press

CONTENTS

List of Illustrations	vi
List of Abbreviations	vii
Acknowledgements	viii
List of Collaborators	x
 Introduction: Food, Peace and Posthumanism	 1
 Part I: Setting the Scene: Politics of Food
1 Food as Instrument of Peace-Conflict	23
2 Food as Posthumanist Peacebuilding	41
3 Researching Food with Young People	62
 Part II: Food as Everyday Peacebuilding
4 The More-Than-Human Peacebuilder	81
5 Transcorporeal Bodies as Food Peacebuilders	102
6 Posthumanist Dialogues during a Pandemic	121
7 Animal Food Peacebuilding	138
8 Food-Care as Peacebuilding	158
 Conclusion: A Food Peace Research Agenda	 178
 Appendix A: Glossary of Key Terms	 193
Appendix B: A Tasting Menu of Food-as-Methods	196
Bibliography	197
Index	234

ILLUSTRATIONS

FIGURES

2.1	Ingredients of posthumanist peacebuilding	43
3.1	Researching with cooking hands	63
3.2	Poké meal before the mess	64
6.1	Sausage rolls in thin plastic bag	123
6.2	Bagged sausage rolls on sheets of paper outside apartments	123
7.1	Animal or food? Source: Philip Bird, Vecteezy.com	138
8.1	Gardening food-care, caring garden	169
8.2	Sign found inside the food co-op	171
9.1	Model of yin-yang	185

TABLES

2.1	Terms in posthumanist peacebuilding	60
6.1	Amplified differences between three forms of dialogue	125

The source for all illustrations is the author unless specified otherwise.