

AMAZONIAN Cosmopolitans

Navigating a Shamanic Cosmos, Shifting
Indigenous Policies, and Other Modern Projects

SUZANNE OAKDALE

Based on the accounts of Prepori and Sabino Kaiabi

UNIVERSITY OF NEBRASKA PRESS LINCOLN

CONTENTS

List of Illustrations	vii
Acknowledgments	ix
Introduction	1
1. Shamanic Cosmopolitanism	23
2. The Positivist Cosmopolitanism of the Brazilian Interior	41
3. Labor and Maturity in the Era of Assimilation	69
4. Becoming the Brazilian “Indian” during the Era of President Vargas, 1930–1945	95
5. Working on the “March to the West”	115
6. The Utopian Cosmopolitanism of the Xingu	139
7. Nostalgia and Disgust	171

Conclusion	199
Source Acknowledgments	205
Notes	207
References.....	219
Index	237

ILLUSTRATIONS

1. Map of locations and ethnic groups21
2. Prepori standing outside his home with his pet hawk, 1993 25
3. Sabino in Tujarare village in the Xingu, 1992..... 71
4. Participants in the “March to the West” holding donated canned food 135
5. Prepori pictured on a postcard with his macaws 158
6. Prepori along with representatives of other Brazilian
Indigenous groups at the National Congress in Brasília 163
7. Photo from Utiariti mission showing representatives of the tribes served..... 183