

A Phenomenological Approach to Quantum Mechanics

Cutting the Chain of Correlations

STEVEN FRENCH

OXFORD
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Contents

Preface	ix
Acknowledgements	xi
1. The Measurement Problem (Featuring the Usual Suspects)	1
1.1 Introduction	1
1.2 The Usual Story of ‘The Measurement Problem’	4
2. The Orthodox Solution, Its History and Multiplicity	8
2.1 Introduction	8
2.2 Heisenberg’s ‘Cut’ and von Neumann’s ‘Chain’	11
2.3 The von Neumann–London–Bauer Theory	13
2.4 Psychophysical Parallelism	16
2.5 Von Neumann and Consciousness	27
2.6 Conclusion	28
3. The Debate about Consciousness	30
3.1 Introduction	30
3.2 Wigner	32
3.2.1 Wigner’s Friend	34
3.2.2 Polanyi and ‘Tacit’ Knowledge	37
3.3 Margenau	40
3.3.1 Interjectivity	43
3.3.2 Margenau on Measurement	44
3.4 Putnam	46
3.5 Shimony	48
3.6 The Debate	50
3.6.1 Margenau and Wigner’s Response	52
3.6.2 Putnam’s Counter	53
3.6.3 Margenau and Wigner’s Counter ²	56
3.6.4 The Practicalities of Measurement	58
3.6.5 Introspective Orthodoxy	59
3.6.6 The Final Word...	62
3.6.7 ...Not Quite	63
3.6.8 Shimony’s Additional Concerns	64
3.6.9 Consciousness and ‘Q-Shape’	69
3.6.10 Introspection and the Reduction of the Wave-Function	71
3.6.11 Intersubjectivity	73
3.7 Testing Telepathy	77
3.8 Conclusion	83

4. Physical and Phenomenological Networks	85
4.1 Introduction	85
4.2 Bauer	85
4.3 London: Philosophical Roots	87
4.4 London: Physics	90
4.5 EPR and Schrödinger's Cat	97
4.5.1 The Disappearance and Reappearance of the Cat	101
4.6 Entanglement	103
4.7 Conclusion	106
5. The Epoché and the Ego	108
5.1 Introduction	108
5.2 The Epoché	110
5.3 The Epoché and Metaphysics	115
5.4 Correlationism	115
5.5 Objectivity and the Constitution of the World	118
5.6 The Ego: Lost...	121
5.7 The Ego: ... and Found	125
5.8 Reconciliation	128
5.9 The Ego: Discarded	130
6. London and Bauer Revisited	138
6.1 Introduction	138
6.2 The Analysis	142
6.2.1 Adopting the Phenomenological Stance	146
6.3 Revisiting the Debate	150
6.3.1 Can Animals Adopt the Phenomenological Stance?	152
6.3.2 Back to the Complaints	154
6.4 Intersubjectivity, Community, and ... Telepathy Again	155
6.5 Anonymity and Objectivity	158
6.6 Criticisms of the Phenomenological Interpretation	163
7. Completing the Crisis	168
7.1 Introduction: Husserl on Objectivity	168
7.2 Phenomenology, Realism, and Empiricism	169
7.3 The 'Crisis' of Modern Science	172
7.4 The Completion of the Crisis	175
8. QBism and the Subjective Stance	186
8.1 Introduction	186
8.2 QBism: Centring the Agent	186
8.3 QBism and the World	189
8.4 QBism and Wigner's Friend	192
8.5 QBism and Phenomenology	195
8.6 Quantum 'Flesh'	200
8.7 Conclusion	206

9. Many Worlds, Many Minds, and (Many) Relations	207
9.1 Introduction	207
9.2 Everett and Wigner's Friend	207
9.3 Everett on 'Subjective Appearances'	210
9.4 From Many Worlds to Many Minds	212
9.5 Relativized Reality	215
9.6 Back to the Born Rule	217
9.7 From Relative States to Relationalism	220
9.8 Relational Quantum Mechanics	221
9.9 Wigner's Friend and Self-Inclusivity	223
9.10 Conclusion: A Comparison	225
10. Interpretation or Reconstruction?	227
10.1 Introduction	227
10.2 Don't Interpret, Reconstruct	228
10.3 Reconstruction and Perspectivalism	229
10.4 Blurring the Line	230
10.5 Conclusion: Between ' ψ -epistemic' and ' ψ -ontic'	232
References	235
Name Index	259
Subject Index	265