

The Psychology of Romantic Relationships

Ami Sha'ked

Academic Center for Law and Business, Ramat Gan, Israel

Ami Rokach

Psychology Department, York University, Toronto, Canada

Erez Zverling

School of Psychology, College of Law and Business, Ramat Gan, Israel; School of Social Work, University of Haifa, Haifa, Israel

ACADEMIC PRESS

An imprint of Elsevier

Contents

List of contributors	xv
Preface	xvii
1. The ups and downs of marriage	1
Changes and trends in romantic relationships and marriage	1
Major trends and changes in marriage	1
Successful versus distressed, marriages	4
Focusing on the positive in relationships	6
Items that compose the mosaic of SSR marriages	7
References	10
 Section 1
Foundations of romantic relationships
 2. Accurate empathy in romantic relationships	15
Empathic accuracy explained	15
The empathic accuracy model	15
Motivated accuracy and motivated inaccuracy	17
Empathic accuracy processes	18
Egocentric simulation	18
Behavioral inference	18
Empathic accuracy and relational quality	20
The empathic accuracy model	21
The truth & bias model	21
Empathic accuracy and attachment styles	22
Empathic accuracy as a double-edged sword	23
Accurate empathy in threatening situations	24
Biases in social perception and inference	25
Empathic accuracy and perception biases in sexual topics	26
The multifaceted nature and effect of accuracy	28
Empathic accuracy regarding partners' honesty	29
Decoding feelings of anger	30
Empathic accuracy in relational stressful situations	31
Empathic accuracy and dyadic coping	31
Empathic accuracy and intuitive thinking	32
 3. Intimacy, the heart and soul of romantic relationships	45
Ami Sha'ked and Noa Nir
Case	45
Defining intimate experience	45
Conditions for the development of intimacy	46
Self-disclosure of feelings and thoughts	46
Implications for couples therapy	48
Perspective of intimacy positive psychology	49
Passion and intimacy	49
Intimacy and passionate love	50
Verbal and nonverbal interactions expressing intimacy	51
Intimacy and attachment	52
Attachment related differences in developing intimacy	53
Fear of intimacy	54
Sensitivity to rejection and fear of Intimacy	55
Questionnaires for testing intimacy	57
Functional analytic psychotherapy intimacy scale	57
Emotional intimacy scale	57
References	57

4. Don't get lost: love-maps in romantic relationships	61	Sexploration: exploring sexuality in relationships	95
The concept of "love-map"	61	Infidelity and attachment styles	96
The development process of love-maps	61	Enduring marital conflict, attachment, and sexuality	96
sexual love-map	63	Alleviating unsecure attachment styles	97
An exercise to enrich "love-map"	64	The impact of partners on each other's attachment style	99
References	64	Softening intimacy aversion of avoidant partners	101
5. Attachment in intimate relationships	65	Treatment of attachment injuries in couples therapy	102
Principles of the attachment theory	65	A measurement of the three attachment categories	103
Hyperactivation of the attachment system	66	Experience in the Close Relationship Scale	103
Deactivation of the attachment system	68	References	104
When an attachment style meets a stressful situation	69	6. Attitude alignment in close relationships	109
Attachment in adulthood	71	The manifestations of relational attitude alignment	109
A spouse as a safe haven	72	Theoretical foundations	110
The spouse as providing a secure-base	73	The balance theory	110
A secure base questionnaire	74	The salience of misalignment hypothesis	110
Noninterference	74	Honesty in attitude alignment	111
Kim Bartholomew: the four attachment styles	74	References	112
Avoidant attachment and empathetic accuracy	75
Attachment biases in perceiving a partner's negative emotions	76
Attachment and commitment to marriage	77
Emotion regulation and attachment	78
Attachment, attention to emotions and biases in emotion processing	80
Attachment differences in response to emotional injury	81
The circle of security in adulthood: the Brooke Feeney's model	82
The interaction between the attachment system and the caregiving system	83
Insecure attachment: poor provision of a safe-haven and secure-base	84
Attachment and conflict situations	86
Impact of attachment styles on managing stress	87
Attachment and the regulation of relational proximity and distance	88
Attachment and causal attributions	89
Attachment and Intimacy	90
Attachment and characteristics of intimate relationships	91
Secure attachment style (autonomous)	91
Anxious-preoccupied attachment style	91
Avoidant-dismissive attachment style	91
Anxious-avoidant attachment style (Fearful-avoidant)	92
Attachment and love	92
Sexuality and attachment	92
Marital distress, sexual, and attachment problems	95
		Section 2
		Building positive connections
		7. Creating, maintaining and sharing positive emotions: capitalization of positive emotions	115
		Broaden-and-build of positive emotions	116
		Sharing positive events and feelings with romantic partners	117
		The theoretical model of capitalization processes	119
		The relational benefits of capitalization	120
		Perceived responses to capitalization attempts	121
		References	122
		8. Feeling and expressing gratitude	125
		Case	125
		Find-remind-and-bind model	125
		Gratitude and intimacy	126
		Gratitude and relational maintenance	126
		Gratitude and its implications for couple therapy processes	127

Questionnaires for assessing gratitude	129	11. Respect and its benefits	161
References	129	The nature of respect in close relationships	161
9. Interdependence is key to well-functioning marriage	131	Theoretical models of respect	162
Theoretical considerations	131	Respect	162
Interdependence, positive emotions, and trust	132	Responsibility	163
Process of mutual cyclical growth	133	Review	163
Emotional interdependence	133	Release	163
Cognitive interdependence	133	Respect in the quadruple theory of love	163
The investment model	134	Self-respect	164
Cognitive interdependence and self-expansion	134	The couple 's respect questionnaire	165
Investment, commitment and relationship interdependence	134	References	165
The investment model scale	137	Further reading	166
References	137
10. Marital commitment	139	Section 3
Case	139	Influencing and supporting each other
Johnson's tripartite model of marital commitment	140	12. The power to influence romantic partners	169
The investment model	141	Strategies and principles of power in romantic relationships	169
Dyadic and communication model	142	Theoretical aspects	170
Levinger's cohesiveness theory of commitment	143	Equality and inequality of relational power	171
Commitment and partners interdependence	144	Influence of relational power	171
Dilemmas of interdependence and commitment to marriage	145	Machiavellianism in romantic relationships	172
Scott Stanley's "simple" model	146	Measuring power and influence in romantic relationships	172
Transformation of motivation, pro-relationship behavior, and commitment	146	References	172
Commitment and the tendency to forgive a betrayal of trust	147
Commitment and gender	147	13. The willingness to sacrifice in romantic relationships	175
Narcissism and commitment in a romantic relationship	148	Case	175
Transforming narcissism to a committed relational partner	150	Interdependence and the tendency to sacrifice	175
The Manhattan effect	150	Relational commitment and sacrifice	176
Transformation of motivation, pro-partner behavior and commitment	151	Motives and models of sacrifice in romantic relationships	177
Interdependence, investment, and commitment	152	Sacrifice and attachment	178
Dependence, commitment, and relational maintenance	154	The light and the dark sides of the act of sacrifice	180
The approach-avoidance and commitment model	155	Personal tendencies that influence the willingness to sacrifice	181
Marital commitment and satisfaction	156	Effect of expectations on sacrifice	183
Commitment to marriage and sacrifice	156	Sacrifice relationships according to Professor Amie Gordon	185
The investment model scale	157	References	185
References	157
		14. Supporting our romantic partners	187
		Support predicts the relational growth and prosperity	187
		Support modes	189

Support and autonomy in an intimate relationship	189	17. The centrality of communication in marriage	221
Types of relational support	190	Subtheme in relational communication processes	221
The dilemma in providing support and its solution	191	Communication during conflicts	222
Invisible support	191	Vulnerability stress adaptation model	223
Characteristics of a support request	193	Communication in stressful situations	224
Negative self-image and indirect support	193	The language used to adapt to stress	225
Relational costs of negative support provision	194	Clinical aspects of communication in couple therapy	225
Clinical applications of research findings on the relational support	195	Negative reciprocity	226
Support in the intimate relationships rating scale	195	Communication and relational social validation	226
References	196	Theory of resilience and relational load	227
15. Self-expansion and its effect on marital intimacy and sexual desire	199	Dyadic coping inventory	228
The principles of the self-expansion model	199	References	228
Measurements of self-expansion	201	18. Loneliness: when a marriage does not enhance a sense of belonging	231
The importance of self-expansion	201	The link between belonging and loneliness	231
Ways to expand the self	202	Development of relational loneliness	233
Self-expansion and the sexual desire	202	Distance and isolation: the cascades of emotional loneliness	233
Improvement in sexual desire	203	Social provisions to prevent relational loneliness	235
Self-expansion protects against betrayal	203	The self-reinforcing loneliness loop: the bidirectional effect of loneliness and mental distress	236
Michelangelo phenomenon	204	Clinical considerations	237
Relational activities to promote self-expansion	205	Interventions to establish a sense of belonging to prevent loneliness	238
Tips for self-expansion in a romantic relationship	206	Loneliness in intimate relationships scale	239
References	206	References	239
Section 4		19. Accommodating partner's destructive behavior	241
Trust, communication, and conflict management		Accommodation-guided relational interaction	241
16. The centrality of trust in romantic relations	211	Theory of interdependence on accommodation	241
Case	211	The happiness factor in a relationship	243
A theoretical and empirical conceptualization of trust	212	The commitment factor	243
Trust-diagnostic situations	213	References	244
A mutual cyclical growth model of the associations among commitment, pro-relationship behavior, and trust	213	20. Causal attributions and conflict in intimate relations	247
Components of trust	214	Theoretical considerations	247
Emotional-focused trust strengthens according to John Gutman	215	Biases in attributions	248
Betrayal of trust	216	Self-serving causal attributions	248
Sexual infidelity	217	Causal attributions and relationships quality and satisfaction	249
Measuring trust in close relationships	218
References	218

Causal attributions according to the contextual model	250	Physical touch as a regulator of emotions	287
Research supplement to attributions	252	Emotion regulation questionnaire	287
References	254	References	288
21. Managing conflicts in romantic relationships	257	Section 5
Consequences of enduring relational conflict	257	Navigating challenges
Patterns of conflict behavior	257	23. Locus of control in romantic relationships	293
Untangle conflict goals	258	Internal locus of control versus external locus of control	293
Conflict communication patterns	259	Relationship locus of control	293
Definition and resolution of conflicts	261	Miller marital locus of control scale	295
Constructive and destructive patterns of conflict management	262	References	295
Adult attachment and conflict behavior	263	24. The effects of dialectic tension	297
Locus of control and conflicts	266	The theory of relational dialectics	297
Commitment, accommodation, and conflict resolution	267	Basic concepts of relational dialectics	299
Neurophysiological factors during a conflict	267	Managing dialectical situations in romantic relationships?	299
Main styles in conflict resolution	268	References	300
Make-up sex following a heated fight evoked by a conflict	268	25. Narcissism and its influence on intimacy and sexuality	301
The Conflict Resolution Inventory	269	Narcissism across the stages of marital development	302
References	269	Emotional regulation and narcissism	303
22. The effects of emotion regulation on couples	273	Narcissism and respect in romantic relationships	304
Regulation of emotions as an interpersonal phenomenon	273	Narcissism and trust	305
Attachment orientation and emotional regulation	273	Components of relational trust	305
Positive feelings	275	Characteristics of the women victims of narcissistic partners	306
Themes of emotional regulation	276	The super trait theory	307
Emotional coregulation	276	The theory of empathy	309
The transition from coregulation to self-regulation	278	Early life trauma	309
The two phenomena of emotion regulation	278	"The victim" as a "target"	310
Emotional injury (hurt feelings)	279	Dependence and addiction to love	310
The emotional blend model	280	Characteristics of women preferred by narcissists	311
Relational evaluation hypothesis	280	A woman who is emotionally vulnerable	312
Appraisals of low relational evaluation underlie hurt feelings	280	A woman who is a giver endlessly	312
Cognitive evaluations of feeling hurt	281	A forgiving and merciful woman	312
Rejection sensitivity	282	A woman who suffered unhealed trauma	312
A model of sensitivity to rejection and emotional hurt	283	A very empathetic and accommodating woman	312
The cognitive-affective processing system model	283	A faithful and loyal woman	313
Anxious expectations	283	A woman with low self-esteem	313
Cognitive perspective	284	A woman with a high tendency to sacrifice	313
Attachment perspective on the emotional regulation	284

A woman who will accept responsibility for everything that happens in a relationship	313	Empathy in the process of stress management	344
A generous woman	313	Regulatory focus theory	345
A woman with personal integrity and high work values	313	Self-regulatory depletion in external stress	346
A woman with weak, unclear boundaries	314	Effects of marital chronic stress on children's adjustment	348
A woman thirsty for love	314	The effect of marital stress on children's academic achievements	349
Survival coping mechanisms of victims of narcissistic abuse	314	The effect of chronic parental stress on the parent-child relationship	349
Romantic life after narcissistic abuse	315	Prevention and intervention programs	350
Sexual narcissism	316	Models of prevention programs	350
Narcissism and satisfaction with sex	317	Dyadic coping inventory	351
Narcissism and the drive for sex	318	References	351
Narcissism, body image, and sexual functioning	319
Narcissism and sexual infidelity	319
Summary of the main characteristics of sexual narcissism	320
The sexual narcissism scale	320
References	320
Further reading	322
26. The many faces of forgiveness	323	Section 6
Body	323	Strengthening the marital bond
Conceptualization of forgiveness	323
The tendency to forgive a partner's wrongdoing	323	28. Maintaining and strengthening the marital relationship	357
Empathy impact on relational forgiveness	324	Maintenance strategies	357
Forgiveness and conflict resolution	325	The sanctity of marriage and its maintenance	358
The effect of forgiveness on health	326	Commitment, attachment, and maintenance in marriage	358
Forgiveness and the need to belong in a romantic relationship	327	Relational maintenance strategies measure	359
Conditions for and stages of relational forgiveness	328	Appreciation and maintenance in a relationship	360
Is forgiving a spouse an expression of weakness?	329	The use of cognitive strategies for maintaining marriages	361
A sense of power and forgiveness	329	Executive control and relationship maintenance	362
Steps in the process of forgiveness to a major wrongdoing	331	Self-control and maintenance	364
Apologizing for the wrongdoing	333	Equity, dialectics, and relational maintenance	365
The two faces of forgiveness	333	Dialectic tension and maintenance	365
Forgiveness of the recall, empathize, altruistic gift, commit, and hold training method	334	A typology of relationship maintenance	366
References	335	The integrative model of relationship maintenance	367
		Perception of marriage as maintenance	368
27. Managing relational stress	339	Communal relationships and maintenance	369
Case	339	Communal sexual relationship	369
Models of coping with relational stress	339	Empathic accuracy and maintenance	372
The systemic-transactional model	340	Attachment and marriage maintenance	372
The developmental-contextual coping model	341	Gratitude as a maintenance activity	373
The relationship-focused coping model	341	Relational maintenance strategies scale	374
The attachment and diathesis-stress model	341	References	374
		29. Marital satisfaction	377
		Marital satisfaction defined	377
		The distinction between satisfied and dissatisfied marriages	377

Social exchange theory on marital satisfaction	378	Attachment and sexual satisfaction	387
The behavioral theory on marital satisfaction	378	Communication and sexual satisfaction	388
Intimacy, love, and satisfaction	379	The effect of orgasmic frequency on sexual satisfaction	389
Marital commitment and satisfaction	379	Health and the well-being benefits of sex satisfaction	390
Attachment and marital satisfaction	380	Effect of relational conflicts on sexual satisfaction	390
Support and satisfaction	381	Parenthood and marital satisfaction	391
Communication and satisfaction	382	Spikes of hope and optimism	391
Emotional regulation and satisfaction in marriage	382	An 11-item marital satisfaction scale	392
Similarity in the philosophy of life and satisfaction	383	References	392
Erosion in marital satisfaction	384	Index	397
A schema-focused view of satisfaction	384
Sex and relational satisfaction	386		