

The ethics of researching the far right

Critical approaches and reflections

Edited by
Antonia Vaughan, Joan Braune,
Meghan Tinsley, and Aurelien Mondon

MANCHESTER UNIVERSITY PRESS

Contents

List of contributors	page viii
Series editors' foreword	xviii
Introduction – Antonia Vaughan, Joan Braune, Meghan Tinsley, and Aurelien Mondon	1
Part I: What's in a name
1 What the far right is(n't) – Omran Shroufi	13
2 Race, racism, and the far right: critical reflections for the field – Kurt Sengul	23
3 When racism seems to be the hardest word: critical reflections from studying the Lega (Nord) – George Newth	36
4 When the far right experiences violence: our ethical duty to the othered – Ryan Switzer	48
5 Ecofascism, far-right ecologism, and neo-Malthusianism – Miranda Jeanne Marie Iossifidis	57
Part II: Positionality, standpoint, and intersectionality
6 'Far right studies' and the unbearable whiteness of being – Aurelien Mondon	75
7 Safety and silence: oral history, far right research, and the paradox of the 'vocal minority' – Imo Kaufman	86
8 On the incompleteness of ethnography: embracing and navigating failure as a principle in research on the far right – Balša Lubarda	96
9 Ethnographic empathy and research ethics as methodological whiteness – Catherine Tebaldi and Rae Jereza	106
10 Emotions in methodology: resisting violent ideological structures in the knowledge-production of extremisms – Elsa Bengtsson Mueller	121

- 11 Reflections on researching armed Nazis as an unarmed left-wing Jew: politics, privilege, and practical concerns – Aaron Winter 133

Part III: The haunting past: memory and far right studies

- 12 Heritage, archaeology, ancestry, and the far right – David Farrell-Banks and Lorna-Jane Richardson 149
- 13 Another way to do ethics: uses of the landscape in the far-right cultural milieu and the ethics of researching them – Andrew Fergus Wilson 161
- 14 Researching memory and heritage during a culture war – Meghan Tinsley, Ruth Ramsden-Karelse, Chloe Peacock, and Sadia Habib 172
- 15 Archiving the extreme: ethical challenges in sharing, researching, and teaching – Daniel Jones 184
- 16 Researching racism in racist times – Jean Beaman 196

Part IV: Care and safety

- 17 How do you respond when you feel under threat? A reflective exploration into my experience with the far right online – Alice Sibley 207
- 18 Community building as a response to care in studying the far right – Kayla Preston 218
- 19 Negotiating contradiction in success and safety: a consideration of environmental constraints on risk management – Antonia Vaughan 228
- 20 Spectre: covert research in digital far-right ‘red zones’ – Jackson Wood 240
- 21 Navigating a feminist ethics of care, ethnographic methods, and academic activism in researching men’s rights and the far right: a researcher’s struggles – Luc S. Cousineau 252

Part V: Complications of engaging far-right participants and formers

- 22 Ethics of listening: between criticism and empathy in oral history interviews and politically charged research contexts – Vanessa Tautter 267
- 23 Harms of the compassion narrative: ethical considerations regarding stories of disengagement from white supremacist movements – Joan Braune 277

24	Voices from the past: a psychosocial reflection on interacting with a far-right activist – Yutaka Yoshida	289
25	Interviewing the ‘unlovable’: on the challenges of conducting feminist research on far-right women – Katherine Williams	300
26	Examining far-right empowerment experiences using YouTube and Parler data: managing researcher safety and ethical and methodological requirements – Carina Hoerst and John Drury	310

Part VI: Activism and dissemination

27	Critically examining the role of the scholar in policymaking on the far right – Richard McNeil-Willson, Michael Vaughan, and Michael Zeller	323
28	Critical reflexivity and research on state responses to the far right – Anna A. Meier	335
29	An anti-racist scholar-activist ethic: working in service to racial justice – Remi Joseph-Salisbury, Laura Connelly, and Aurelien Mondon	345
30	The far right from the underside of history: decolonising far right studies – Isis Giraldo	356
31	How should journalists engage with the far right? – Gary Younge	367
32	Researching the far right: towards an ethics of talking ‘about’ – Katy Brown	379
	Index	391