

The Alphabetisation of Thought

Orthography, Locke, and Natural Philosophy

By

Michael M. Isermann

BRILL

LEIDEN | BOSTON

Contents

Acknowledgements	VII
Notes on the Text	IX
List of Figures and Illustrations	X

Introduction: Anachronisms, Pre-concepts and the Alphabetisation of Thought	1
---	---

PART I

Locke and the Alphabetisation of Thought

1 Writing and the Mind	29
1 The Rise and Fall of Writing	29
2 Writing, Printing and the Mind	36
3 The Printing Office and the Mind's Faculties	51
4 The Compositor and the Spelling Tradition	58
2 Orthography and the Mind	68
1 The Alphabet and the Mind	68
2 Simple Ideas and the littera	76
3 Orthoepy and Orthography: a Humanist Prelude	91
4 Mulcaster and Locke on Common Use	101
5 Hart, Locke and Spelling Vices	107
3 The Alphabetisation of Thought	123
1 Approaching the Alphabetisation of Thought	123
2 Orthographic Vices and the Alphabetisation of Thought	130
3 The Stages of Alphabetisation	142
4 Alphabetisation and the Categories of Change	148
4 Alphabetisation and the Tradition	157
1 Locke and Ideas as Signs	157
2 Writing and the Truth of Ideas	171
3 Alphabetical Order and Essentialism	185
4 The Standardisation of Writing	194

PART 2Practical Routines and Theoretical Framework

- 5 Thinking, Spelling and Ciphering 207
 - 1 Marigolds and Violets 207
 - 2 Simple Ideas and Simple Secrets 215
 - 3 Cryptography and Orthography 234
 - 4 Ciphering and the Teaching of Pronunciation 246
Excursus on the Alphabetisation of Thought and Linguistic Practices 258

- 6 Extending the Spelling Reform 268
 - 1 From Rational Spelling to a Universal Alphabet 268
 - 2 Universal Characters and Philosophical Languages 277
 - 3 The Cipher Model of Communication 295
 - 4 Wilkins's Phonetic Character and the Communication of Sounds 304

- 7 Representation and Analogy 322
 - 1 Robert Boyle and the Encrypted Nature 322
 - 2 Analogy and Alphabetisation 334
 - 3 Contextualising the Alphabetisation of Thought 345

- Bibliography 363
- Index 394